GENERAL STATEMENT

Organization.—Detroit College comprises at present the following departments: The College, the Classical High School, the English High School.

Aim.—It is the aim of Detroit College to impart a Christian and liberal education. It does not intend to give professional or university instruction; but it aims at a sound and broad preparation for later specialized effort. It labors to send forth its students so harmoniously developed mentally and morally, that they will be prepared to take up and prosecute any career, whether business or professional, and to do it better than those who have missed the advantage of such a preparation.

Location and Equipment.—The College, situated on Jefferson Avenue, between St. Antoine and Hastings Streets, is easily accessible from all parts of the city. The old building, which for many years served for both Academic and College students, has been reserved for the classes of the High School.

A large new addition was completed in January of the past year. On the ground floor is the gymnasium, one of the finest in the city, 100 feet long, 56 feet wide, and 22 feet high. It is equipped with the apparatus usually found in modern gymnasiums. Off the gymnasium are the locker and shower rooms. The gymnasium, well lighted, large and airy, makes a very attractive auditorium, and is used for the ordinary public College exercises. The second and third floors contain the class rooms for the College classes. The chemistry lecture-room and laboratory on the third floor, and the physics lecture-room and laboratory on the second floor, afford excellent opportunity for scientific work.

System of Education.—The educational system, substantially the same as that of the 32 universities and 195 colleges conducted by the Society of Jesus throughout the world, is based upon the principles of the famous Ratio Studiorum, modified in details to meet the varying exigencies of time and place. It is not an experiment, but an organized system, definite in its principles and in its purpose, resting upon a long and wide experience. It advocates a wise, deliberate and prudent election by men whose profession is education, not a sudden, reckless, labor-shirking choice by inexperienced youths just entering upon the process of education.

Curriculum of Studies.—In accordance with this system the studies in the various departments are, for the most part, prescribed. Some latitude of choice is left to the students in the College Department; but here, too, all those studies, which are deemed essential for a liberal education, are prescribed. The Curriculum embraces the doctrines and evidences of the Christian Religion; Philosophy, including Logic, Ontology, Cosmology, Psychology, Natural Theology and Ethics; Latin and Greek; French and German; English with all its cognate branches, as Rhetoric, Composition, Literature; History; Science and Mathematics; Elocution and Oratory.

Home Study.—The efforts of the Faculty will be rendered vain without close and constant application on the part of students themselves. Accordingly, parents, who desire their sons to meet with success, will insist upon careful study and preparation at home. Students in the College are expected to spend in home preparation of class-work not less than three hours daily; those in the High School, not less than two hours daily.

Attendance.—Regular attendance and punctuality are prime factors in the attainment of success. When a student has been absent or tardy, a note of excuse from parents or guardians, explaining the cause of absence or tardiness, must be presented by the student to the Prefect of Studies. Frequent absence, except in case of sickness or for other weighty reasons, is sufficient cause for requesting the student's withdrawal.

Discipline.—In the system employed by the College one of the most important features is the formation of character. With this end in view, the discipline, while mild and considerate, is unflinchingly firm, especially when there is a question of the good of the student body or of the reputation of the College. Disobedience, insubordination, or violations of gentlemanly conduct cannot be tolerated.

As the greatest help in maintaining good discipline is found in the appeal to conscience and religion, special attention is paid to moral instruction. The Catholic students are expected to comply regularly with their religious obligations, and to make annually a spiritual retreat for three days. Sodalities and other associations are also provided for the fostering of a manly piety.

Admission.—Applicants not personally known to some member of the Faculty must present satisfactory evidence of good moral character. For information as to entrance requirements for the different departments, consult the outline of courses.

No boarders are received at the College. Students from outside the city may secure board and lodging for $3.50 and upwards per week. Since the College cannot be held responsible for students thus situated, parents should provide suitable guardians for them.

Sessions and Holidays.—The scholastic year consists of one session, divided into two terms: the first from September to January, the second from January to the latter part of June. Recesses are granted at Christmas and Easter. The ordinary holidays are: Feasts of obligation, State and National holidays, Pentecost Monday, the patronal feast of the Rev. President. Thursday is the regular weekly holiday.

Examinations and Competitions.—There are two examinations during the year: the Mid-year, at the end of the first term, and the Final, immediately before the close of the scholastic year in June. Besides these examinations there are three competitions, at the end of October, February and April. The averages obtained in these examinations and competitions are noted in the bi-monthly reports.

Promotions.—In the case of unusually successful students promotion may occur in the course of the year; and such promotion is equivalent to the honors of the lower class. Ordinarily, however, promotions are made only at the end of the year as the result of a successful examination. Neither promotion nor a re-examination will be granted to students who fail to attain a general average of 67 per cent. Those who get a general average of 67 per cent, but who fail in three of the branches, styled "principal," viz., Latin, Greek, English and Mathematics (or their equivalents in the English course) will neither be promoted nor allowed a re-examination. In other cases of failure a re-examination is allowed, and required.

Awards.—The honors and prizes awarded at the Annual Commencement in June are determined by the competitions and Mid-year examination, together with the recitations and written work of the entire year. The Gold Medal in each class is awarded to the student having the highest average in the collective branches of the class, an average of at least 90 per cent being required. For First Honors a general average of 90, and for Second Honors a general average of 85 is required. At the end of every two months the standing of the students in their respective classes is announced in presence of the Faculty and students, and testimonials of excellence are awarded.

Degrees.—The successful completion of the College course entitles the student to the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

The degree of Master of Arts can be obtained by devoting a further year to the study of Philosophy in the College, or two years to professional studies.

Honorary degrees may be conferred at the discretion of the Board of Trustees upon those who have deserved well of the community in Literature, Science, or the Professions.

No degrees will be given to those who have not satisfied their obligations to the institution.

Recitation Hours.—The College is opened at 7:30 A. M. Those who come before the time of class, devote the interval to private study. All students are required to be present at 8:30 A. M., unless they are excused by the Prefect of Studies. Regular class recitations begin at 9:00 A. M. The noon recess lasts from 11:45 A. M. until 1:00 P. M. The classes are dismissed at 3:00 P. M.

Societies.—Besides the various religious organizations, namely, the League of the Sacred Heart, the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin, the Acolythical Society, there are many flourishing societies among the students of both Collegiate and High School departments. Among these may be mentioned the two debating societies, the Philomathic and the Philalethic, the Students' Library, and the Athletic Association. The Alumni Association keeps strong the bond of union between the College and old students.

Foundation and Scholarships.—When the present college building was erected, generous donations were made to the building fund. The title of "Founder" was conferred upon persons who gave the sum of $5,000. Their names are inscribed upon a marble tablet erected in the vestibule of the College. It is hoped that the friends of higher Catholic education will be inspired to imitate their generosity. A gift of $5,000 entitles the donor to the honor of being numbered among the "Founders" of the College. Up to the present time the Founders are:

Francis F. Palms,	Charles F. Hammond,
Thomas F. Griffin,	William J. Hammond,
Fred. T. Moran,	Catherine E. Barnard,
Jeremiah Dwyer,	M. J. and J. P. Dinan,
Helen M. Pernin,	Louis Frumveller.

A number of friends and promoters of higher education, realizing the importance, especially in our time, of a thorough liberal and Christian training, such as is imparted by Detroit College, have generously shown their active interest and given substantial encouragement by establishing scholarships.

There are perpetual and course scholarships. A perpetual scholarship is founded when the endowment is sufficiently large to yield an annual interest that will cover the yearly tuition fees. A course scholarship represents an amount necessary for a full course, entitling the holder, upon successful examination at the end of the course, to the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

The scholarship bears the name selected by the founder.

Perpetual Scholarships.—The John P. Fleitz Scholarship, founded by Mrs. J. P. Fleitz; the James Flattery Scholarship, founded by Mrs. James Flattery; the Neil Flattery Scholarship, founded by Mr. Neil Flattery; the Jeremiah Dwyer Scholarship, founded by Mr. Jeremiah Dwyer; the Francis F. Palms Scholarship, founded by Mr. Francis F. Palms; the Alexander Chapoton, Sr., Scholarship, founded by Mrs. Alexander Chapoton, Sr.; the James L. Edson Scholarship, founded by his daughters, Mrs. Frank W. Smith and Mrs. Frank C. Baldwin; the St. Joseph Scholarship, founded by Mr. Louis Frumveller; the Stapleton Scholarship, founded by Misses Josephine and Ella Stapleton.

Course Scholarships.—The E. H. Doyle Scholarships; the Henry Blackwell Scholarships; the Detroit Council, Knights of Columbus Scholarship; the Frederick E. Flattery Scholarship; the Hugo A. Gilmartin Scholarship; the M. L. S. Scholarship; the Rosary Society (Jesuit Church) Scholarship; the Alumni Association Scholarship.

Expenses.—As the institution is not endowed, it is entirely dependent for its support on the fees paid for tuition.

Tuition for all classes, ten months.....$60.00
Physics and Chemistry, lecture-room and laboratory fee $15.00
Diplomas for degrees $10.00
Gymnasium fee $2.00
Conditioned examinations $1.00
Conditioned examinations, on days other than those assigned by the Faculty..... $2.00

Payments must be made quarterly in advance. No deduction is allowed for absence, except in case of dismissal or protracted illness. The session is divided into quarters, beginning respectively on the opening day of the scholastic year, the 15th of November, the 1st of February, and the 15th of April.

Needs of the College.—The Faculty feel that the patrons of higher Catholic education will be interested in a statement of the needs of the College. Begun without any endowment apart from some aid given by generous friends toward the erection of buildings, the College has borne and decreased a large debt because of the hard and self-sacrificing labors of the Jesuit Fathers and Professors in charge. During the thirty-three years of its existence it has done a work of which its friends are justly proud.

Still no college that is hampered by lack of means can produce the good that would result if more ample resources were in its hands. And so the College would outdo its past efforts if its needs were met.

More scholarships endowed would furnish the College with funds and help to realize its dream of furnishing free an education as good as the best. Meanwhile such endowments would open the way to an excellent college training for many worthy young men who are shut out from the accomplishment of their ambition by lack of means.

Owing to the limitation of the recreation grounds as to size and availability, considerable expense must be met each year to secure suitable grounds for athletic purposes. The friends of the College could give great assistance by securing a suitably located athletic field as the permanent property of the institution.

THE COLLEGE

The College course is classical, and is designed to impart a thorough liberal education. Experience has shown that this course, in which the ancient classics hold a prominent place as the most efficient instrument of mental discipline, is of the highest excellence. It develops all the faculties, forms a correct taste, teaches the student how to use all his powers to the greatest advantage, and prepares him for any pursuit in after life.

This course, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, embraces four years, which by earnest work may be shortened to three years. For the degree of A. B. there are required eighteen credits; a credit being obtained by the successful completion of one year's work in a study with at least four periods a week. Of these credits the following are obligatory: Latin, two; Greek, two; Mathematics, one and one-half; English, two; History, two; Philosophy, two and one-half. The remaining credits are to be made up from the work outlined for the College classes.

THE HIGH SCHOOL

There are two courses offered to students entering upon their High School studies—the Classical and the English. Students who intend to follow the College course and prepare themselves for the degree of A. B. should follow the Classical course.

Entrance Requirements.—The completion of the eighth grade of a full grammar course in a public or parochial school is required for entrance to the High School. From applicants, who have completed such a course, certificates will be accepted, signed by the Principal of the school.

All other applicants must be prepared to stand an examination in eighth grade subjects of a grammar school curriculum.

All who make application for advanced standing must give satisfactory evidence by examination or certificate, of having done the work beyond which they desire to be advanced.

The most satisfactory time for entrance is the opening of the school year in September.

THE ENGLISH DEPARTMENT.

The purpose of this course is to offer to those who lack either the inclination or the time for a full classical training the means of acquiring an education as full as possible. It is not supposed that the mental faculties will be so fully or harmoniously developed by this curriculum as by the more liberalizing influence of the classical course. Still, for those who do not intend to go on to the College course, it affords a satisfactory training.

The courses of this English department are, in general, the same as those of the Classical department, with this exception, that French and German are substituted for the ancient classics.

THESES IN PHILOSOPHY

MID-YEAR EXAMINATION OF THE SENIOR CLASS
JANUARY 29, 1910

CRITERIOLOGY.

1. Logical truth is found in the judgment.
2. Neither the simple apprehension, as such, nor immediate judgments can be false.
3. Certitude exists: consequently scepticism must be rejected.
4. By our external senses we really perceive bodies outside of ourselves.
5. The external senses, acting under proper conditions, are reliable with regard to their proper object of sensation.
6. Reasoning, when it is materially and formally true, is infallibly certain.
7. The testimony of men, under certain conditions, can give perfect certainty.
8. Neither authority, whether human or divine, nor blind instinct, nor Descartes' clear and distinct idea can be the ultimate and universal criterion of certitude.
9. The evidence of the objective truth is the ultimate and universal criterion of certitude.

ONTOLOGY.

1. The idea of "being-in-general" is not univocal, but analogical.
2. Essences are in a certain sense indivisible, necessary and eternal. It is false to assert that essences are entirely unknown to us.

3. The internal possibility of things does not depend formally either on the power or on the will of God; but it depends proximately on the Divine Intellect, and remotely on the Divine Essence.
4. Every being is one, true, and good.
5. The concept of substance is objectively real.
6. There is a real distinction between quantity and corporeal substance.
7. We have a clear idea of efficient cause, which must necessarily contain in itself the perfection which it gives to the effect.

COSMOLOGY.

1. The world cannot possibly be self-existent, nor can it be an emanation from the divine substance.
2. The origin of the world can be explained only by creation.
3. God created the world for His extrinsic glory.
4. This world was not created from eternity.
5. This world is not absolutely, but only relatively, perfect.
6. There are in all bodies two substantial principles, that of extension or first matter, and that of specific action or substantial form.
7. The laws of nature are not absolutely necessary; and therefore miracles are possible.
8. In many cases miracles can be distinguished from the results of any created agency.

PSYCHOLOGY.

1. The human soul is a simple and spiritual substance.
2. The human soul cannot originate except by creation.
3. The human soul is immortal.
4. From the union of the body and the soul there results one compound nature and one person; so that the intellectual soul is the substantial form of the body.

5. The reflex universals are not mental images derived from universal objects physically existing; nor are they mere names, nor mere fictions of the mind; but they are mental images that have a foundation in the reality of the individual objects.
6. The will of man is free in as much as it enjoys not only objective and passive indifference, but, above all, active indifference.

THEODICY.

1. The existence of God can be proved by metaphysical, physical, and moral arguments.
2. The physical essence of God embraces every conceivable perfection. Among these, self-existence is the attribute, which according to our way of thinking constitutes His metaphysical essence.
3. There can be only one God.
4. God's being is both physically and metaphysically simple.
5. God knows all things, even all that any free creature would do in a given case. These last He knows "in themselves."
6. God is free in all His external acts.
7. God physically and immediately concurs in every act of creatures. This concurrence does not interfere with human liberty, nor does it make God the author of moral evil.

GENERAL ETHICS.

1. God alone is the last objective end of man.
2. The standard of morality is neither pleasure nor utility nor positive law, but the objective order of things.

3. The morality of an act is determined by three elements: namely, the end in view, the means taken, and the circumstances accompanying the act.
4. There exists in man a natural law, which must have a sufficient sanction attached.
5. It is never allowed to act with a doubtful conscience; but it is allowed to follow a solidly probable opinion, whenever there is question of what is lawful or unlawful.

SPECIAL ETHICS.

1. Man owes God both interior and exterior worship.
2. Revelation is not only possible, but morally necessary. The surest marks of a revelation are miracles and prophecies.
3. Suicide and duelling are unlawful; but the killing of an unjust aggressor is not unlawful.
4. Lying is intrinsically evil and therefore never permitted. Mental reservation is, however, sometimes lawful.
5. The right of private ownership, even in land, is sanctioned by the natural law. The determination of this right is not by compact nor by positive law, but by some active occupancy.
6. Man is by nature a social being; hence the savage state is not the primitive state of man.
7. The marriage state, ordained by God, is necessary indeed for the human race, but not for each individual.
8. By nature the marriage bond is one and indissoluble.
9. The duty of educating the child belongs per se and primarily to the parents. Hence they have a natural, strict, and inalienable right to educate their children.
10. Civil authority is received by human society immediately from God; but the subject in whom the authority resides receives it immediately from the people and mediately from God.

11. The state has not of itself the primary right to educate. Hence it has no right to make compulsory school laws. It may and should assist parents by providing the means of education and even by educating the children whose parents neglect their duty.
